

One of our contemporaries has published a declaration to the effect that a confidential agent of the rebel War Department has declared, in an official report to that Department, as published in the Richmond papers, that he passed and repassed our lines repeatedly, each time taking the oath of allegiance without the slightest hesitation and each time violating it without the least compunction. Undoubtedly this declaration, vauntingly made by an employee of the rebel Government and published under the auspices of that Government, should teach our military authorities the utmost caution. They should guard with the greatest vigilance against being imposed on. They should adopt every means to prevent themselves against perjury. They should view rebel professions and rebel oaths with distrust. It may well be doubted whether the whole rebellion is in the breaking of the most solemn oath that ever lay upon the souls of mortal men—the oath of allegiance—and that persons guilty of breaking that oath once, may break it as often as they have the opportunity, just as persons who have once violated the temperance pledge are very sure to violate it as many times as they take it.

While, however, we should scrupulously protect ourselves against all the wiles and villainies of perjured spies and impostors, we should on the other hand hold out every motive consistent with caution to induce honestly repentant rebels to leave the ranks of our enemies and make their home among us. We help support that one object of the Confederate authorities in publishing the report of the rebel agent, and we help to take the oath, and then go back to betray us to the military authorities to the indiscriminate exercise of such severity and harshness against persons pouring into our lines from their Confederacy as to prevent any one of their people from daring to follow the example.

The Hartford Times says an "unconditional Union man" is now understood to be a man who won't have anything to do with the Union, but that of abolition.—Boston Courier.

Undoubtedly this is now the understanding amongst the radicals. And we may add that in the same quarter "a conditional Union man" is now understood to be a man who will have the Union of the Constitution with or without slavery. This is the understanding of the radicals. This is the understanding of the radicals. This is the understanding of the radicals.

It cannot be too often said that the Union is not the object of the radical party. It cannot be too often said that the Union is not the object of the radical party. It cannot be too often said that the Union is not the object of the radical party.

The Senate this morning after various suggestions adopted a resolution to adjourn on Monday next to meet again on the first Wednesday (4th) of January, 1865. This has been the usual principle of the Union, and now adopted as a principle of the Union, and now adopted as a principle of the Union.

Senators Robinson and Bristow were connected with Senators Landrum, Goodloe, and Granger on the committee to procure a full length portrait of Henry Clay for the Senate Chamber.

The Senate Committee on Internal Improvement, to whom was referred a resolution of inquiry into the condition of the public works of the State, have made a report, which states that the Green and Barren river line of navigation is entailing a heavy debt upon the State, and that there seems to be negligence and inattention in its management.

The members of the Board, resident in this city, have given notice to the committee, thinking it advisable for the funds to be carried through the usual channels of the Auditor's and Treasurer's offices. The act of March 10, 1854, authorizes the President of the Board to make requisition upon the Treasury for the amount necessary to pay for repairs and other necessary expenses to keep each line of navigation in good order.

It is a prospect, however, that the committee, thinking it advisable for the funds to be carried through the usual channels of the Auditor's and Treasurer's offices. The act of March 10, 1854, authorizes the President of the Board to make requisition upon the Treasury for the amount necessary to pay for repairs and other necessary expenses to keep each line of navigation in good order.

If there be any one who hopes for the Union of the States under the Constitution, or even from any Union under any constitution, let that man solemnly consider the necessity of a change of Administration and a change of policy as the only possible means by which it can be accomplished.

It seems that Marshal Kane and a large number of Confederate officers have escaped from Johnson's Island to Canada. We suppose they got off on the ice. But the Federal authorities shouldn't have let them slide. It was a most creditable piece of business.

We think that Gen. McPherson at Vicksburg did right in sending some rebel ladies into Dixie for money, and that the ladies in question were the wives of some of the rebel officers.

It seems to be certain from the diplomatic correspondence recently published that a bill will be presented to John Bull for the pillaging done on the high seas by the Confederate privateers built in his ports.

If a States, dead in secessionism and other sins, can be restored to true genuine life, let all means be done as soon as possible. But what is the use of galvanizing a State to make it show spasmodic and ghastly signs of life?
